In the middle and higher ranks it differs in the circumstance, on the Continent, of ex- tent and show in houses and apartments being preferred to neatness, cleanliness, and comfort ; in the greater use of vege- tables in cookery; in a more complex and refined cookery; and in the greater use of fruits, and the more moderate use of wines and spirituous liquors, at table. One is too dainty, and the other is too gross.

Thomas Jones (1742)

The chlorine gas is gradually evolved, passing through the earth of the pot to the seeds, accordingly as the heat required for the different species induces. I point out that these stories of flows of stones are not conventional stories, and are not well known.

Thomas Jones (1742)

Much as we were satisfied with the agriculture and gardening in these three states of Germany, we were incomparably more so with the state of general education, and its influence on the manners and happiness of the people. I shall be scientific about it. Waves that billowed from this excitement beat upon Table Mountain, South Africa, and in the surf that fell upon Cape Town, people bobbed into a Committee that was sent to investigate.
