BLACKFEET AND BUFFALO: MEMORIES OF LIFE AMONG INDIANS By James Willard Schultz

Massive herds of introduced stock animals and new seed crops soon crowded out aboriginal game animals and native plants. THE GOLD RUSH The discovery of gold in the foothills of the Sierra Nevada at a sawmill construction site developed by Indian Agent Johann Sutter, ushered in one of the darkest episodes of dispossession widespread sexual assault and mass murder against the native people of California. They further made elaborate promises to upgrade squalid housing, pave roads, build bridges, construct water projects and even provide college scholarships in return for a vote to terminate.
