Thus, Gentlemen, I have stated the Facts which that wicked and inhuman Man at the Bar perpetrated, upon which the deceased's worthy Master, who is a Gentleman of great Honour and Companion, with an opulent Fortune, took all the Steps that possible he could to bring those Offenders to Justice, who had so cruelly deprived him of such a faithful Servant. No; it was between three and four in the afternoon; on his going into the cellar, I went and told Wade, the other witness, as I was ordered to do; I returned to the cellar, and Wade followed me; I then saw a man, with a basket on his shoulder, come out of the cellar that Taylor had gone into. Vaughan promised me, if I had any body that would join in a note to pay a shilling a week, he would make a debt of it.
