For example, if the student has a short attention span, you might accommodate this learning characteristic by modifying the length of the material.

Mission Statement

Osborne 2003 said that the ability to use augmentative communication systems, fluency, literacy skills of expression, reciprocity of conversation and listening skills are valuable and necessary for all pupils to acquire, but they are dependent on an intention and drive children with autism typically lack. These children need special care and attention. Replication site staff showed gains in implementing art activities and making adaptations for children with disabilities.
