A genomic atlas of human adrenal and gonad...

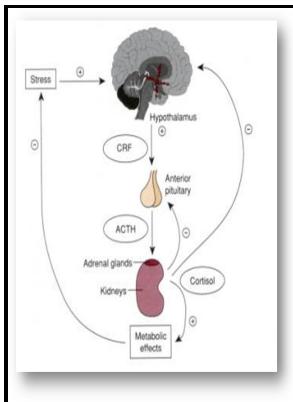

In vitro studies show that COUP-TFs suppress the transcriptional activity of SF1 , CYP17 gene transcription in Y-1 murine adrenocortical cells , and StAR protein expression in bovine adrenal glomerulosa cells. Differentially expressed genes in the testis compared to ovary. Heterozygous mice with one disrupted allele of the SF1 gene show a decrease in adrenocortical volume, coupled with decreased stress-induced corticosterone response.

17.6 The Adrenal Glands

These effects of IGF-1 are mediated by the IGF-R1, a member of the receptor tyrosine kinase family.

Germ

In sum, a range of aspects of the physical environment is pivotal for stimulating development of the preterm infant. The family members have described roles in regulating mitosis, cell adhesion, migration, growth arrest, apoptosis, differentiation, and tumorigenesis —. Although rare, this cancer can affect the cortex, which is the outer part of the adrenal gland.

Adrenocortical ultrastructure in the squaliform elasmobranch (Ginglymostoma cirratum bonnaterre): Cell death, a postulate for holocrine secretion

The role of the fetal adrenal cortex in human pregnancy and parturition appears highly complex, probably due to redundant and compensatory mechanisms regulating these events. In the DZ, both proteins are absent until 22 wk but emerge after 23 wk.

Paper

We have not been able to address this further at present but will do so if we explore the role of SCUBE1 in the future.
