But why then did some Anglican wives and daughters frequent the confessional? In this account, the religious superior encouraged daily confession, and some of the sisters became fascinated with the priest. Furthermore, the author shows that Roman Catholics were not simply the passive victims of aggression, but were responsible, by their theological and political militance, for provoking much of the Protestant reaction against them. On 25 September 1953 he was imprisoned at Grudziądz, and later placed under house arrest in monasteries in Prudnik near Opole and in Komańcza in the Bieszczady Mountains.
