A unique and interesting aspect of the relationsis that founders of the three Deccan Sultanates - the Bahmanis, the Adil Shahis and the Qutb Shahi were of Iranian origin and were Shi'ahs, the vital link, between the Safavid Iran and the Deccan. The author, relying on all the available documentation, thus embarked on a thorough reevaluation of the question, taking a minute care not to leave any point unexplained.

The study synthesizes the triangular nexus of Safavid Iran, Mughals and the Deccan. One of this book's interests, and not the least, is to remind the reader of this magnificent period, these first Hegirian centuries that were so lively and characterized by an extreme diversity of opinion, an intellectual boldness and an unbelievable freedom of speech and behaviour in spite of the violence unleashed to repress it.

Historical Framework - an outline II. The evidence include texts in Nabatean which Gruendler accepts as the immediate precursor to Arabic , pre-Islamic Arabic inscriptions, epigraphic texts, and Arabic papyri. Yet the question of zanādiqa in Islam, although the subject of numerous previous works, still remained incomplete.
