The Governmental Public Health Infrastructure

Restrictions to timely recruitment and hiring from centrally set human resource budget ceilings and legislative controls are common concerns of local health managers.

The Governmental Public Health Infrastructure

They want well-functioning routine personnel administration systems in order to improve efficiency and minimize labor conflicts.

Decentralization's impact on the health workforce: Perspectives of managers, workers and national leaders

Policies in Northern Ireland and Wales unfortunately tend to go unevaluated. All of these elements—data, information, and knowledge—are critical products of public health information networks. If their employment status changes from national civil servants to local employees, they want to maintain at least the level of benefits, seniority, and status that they had before decentralization.

DOH Devolution

Emerging infectious diseases: consensus on needed laboratory capacity could strengthen surveillance.

DOH Devolution

There is very little in the literature about decentralization's impact on working conditions in the developing world, other than observations, referenced before in this paper, that financial restrictions have reduced availability of essential drugs, supplies and transport.
