American literature

Shortly after our book reached print, Paul Oehser, then director of publications at the Smithsonian Institution, published a letter in Science, the official publication of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, pointing out a particularly interesting sentence in the letter. Particularly full of vivid touches were the writings of two groups of American humorists whose works appeared between 1830 and 1867.

He rang the front door bell, and as she answered the door a large and ferocious dog came snapping and snarling around the corner of the house. When I showed the manuscript to Thomas Blanding, the Thoreau authority in Concord, he picked up on this and said he vaguely recollects that Ellery Channing mentioned a Concord woman botanist in his biography of Thoreau. But, alas, I was unable to get up to Lexington to see and interview her before she died.
