CURRENT LISTING OF CURRIER AND IVES PRINTS

Note that fake platemarks are not uncommon, but these usually differ in character from real platemarks. Originally known as Jeremiah Fine Art when we were founded in 1986 by Jeremy Sewell, we took on the new name in 1999 when we started selling online for the first time. Even though woodblock prints done in the sosaku-hanga style don't look like other paintings, collectors in Japan would put these right alongside any other in the gallery for viewing.

Guide to Collecting John James Audubon

I purchased the prints in early 1980s at the Smithsonian or at the National Gallery of Art in DC, when there was a big show of Audubon prints. All reproductions are made by a different process than originals; reproductions are photomechanically produced and originals are not. The other is unframed and in mint condition, and is called Battle of Tetuan.

Antique Prints of the most wanted types of Flower

In terms of value, this blog is not a place I discuss specific values, but I would bet you can find this print for sale on the web, which should give you an idea.
