Nitration (video)

The nitration of benzene Nitration happens when one or more of the hydrogen atoms on the benzene ring is replaced by a nitro group, NO₂. However, the presence of a second strongly-activating substituent group permits acylation; the site of reaction is that favored by both substituents.

The mononitrotoluene had the following composition: 44. The negative charge was spread through both oxygens.

Nitration development is a complex, lengthy and expensive process. So we start over here with the dot structure for nitric acid.

Electrophilic Aromatic Substitution

Formation of dinitro products from this reaction is unlikely under the conditions in which you carry out your reaction. Aromatic nitration is a class of industrially important reactions for the synthesis of chemical intermediates with direct relevance to dyes, plastics, and pharmaceuticals.
