Alternatives, critical psychiatry, philosophy, politics

Surveys have indicated that military personnel are not taking full advantage of the medical and psychiatric resources at their disposal. These proposals emphasized the importance of educating general practitioners in the principles of psychiatry, thereby integrating psychiatric approaches in primary health care settings.

Mental health services in crisis are abandoning patients to meet targets

According to a recent survey of 880 community behavioral health care organizations, 61 percent have shuttered at least one program due to the pandemic; and nearly all of organizations surveyed have reduced their operations. Also, mental health providers frequently are than physical health providers, a 2017 report notes, leaving institutions sometimes struggling to cover salaries.
