A History Of Philosophical Systems by Vergilius Ture Anselm Ferm

Until the last days of the Soviet period, there was no consensus as to what it is or its relation to formal logic. Other process accounts hold that being is ongoing self-differentiation; on these accounts becoming is both the mode of being of different kinds of dynamic beings and the process that generates different kinds of dynamic beings. In some process accounts, becoming is the mode of being common to the many kinds of occurrences or dynamic beings.

Philosophy of Education

Unlike the mechanists, they saw nature as fundamentally dialectical, which could not be reduced to simpler mechanical terms. Since then, various areas of investigation that were traditionally part of philosophy have become separate academic disciplines, such as , , , and .
