Four Courts Press

Yes I can, is that where they are? This anthology of Ulster-Scots writing charts the breadth and diversity of Scottish influences upon Ulster writing from the 17th century to the present day. For the first time, this is explored through literary prose, poetry and drama and a number of other important genres - philosophy, political and polemical texts, sermons, historiography, etc. The absence of an agreed orthography is another challenge to Ulster Scots writing. On his first day as an apprentice, Tucker takes him up on to the top of the Arrol Gantry, a huge steel structure built in 1908 that dominated the Belfast shipyards until the 1960s, before being replaced by the now iconic Samson and Goliath cranes.

Ulster

Although there is a body of Ulster Scots work appearing in specialist sources this work often deals with the past. The work of several of the poets discussed in this volume Hugh Porter, James Orr and Samuel Thomson was subsequently reprinted in the early 1990s in the Folk Poets of Ulster series. This emphasis hampers the capacity of the language to appear open to all.

Towards an Anthology of Ulster

Philip Robinson is married with three children and has been living in the Ards Peninsula, County Down, for the past thirty years.
