Details Astrologer Richard Nolle Richard Nolle is a graduate of the University of Florida. If you take an average, general practice physician, the chances of he or she having Saturn in that critical position is much less than the chart of a highly prominent physician, one who is frequently published and renowned in their field. As the polarized arguments over quantitative versus qualitative research have drug on and on and on, ad nauseum, the point that seems to arise repeatedly is that qualitative research has developed as a paradigm in recent years due to the biased, mechanical one-dimensionality and potential superficiality that quantitative methods sometimes, due to their very nature, have yielded.
