Wordsworth: a collection of critical essays. Edited by M. H. Abrams

Turning more closely to Wordsworth's statement that 'the language too of these men is adopted because such men hourly communicate with the best objects from which the best part of language is originally derived; and because, from their rank in society and the sameness and narrow circle of their intercourse, being less under the action of social vanity, they convey their feelings and notions in simple and unelaborated expressions'. Duncan Wu is Professor of English at Georgetown University. At the same time there has been a more general renewal of interest across a wide range of humanistic and social science disciplines in rhetoric itself: language use, writing and speaking, persuasion, figurative language, and the effect of texts. Man, by nature, is a bundle of contradictions. His essays and reviews have appeared in the Southern Quarterly, Sewanee Review, Georgia Review, South Atlantic Quarterly, Wordsworth Circle, New York Times Book Review, and elsewhere.
